

OGDEN GIRL IS GIVEN HONORS

Mariane Browning Receives Written Praise After N. Y. Appearance

"If America had more Marianes Brownings we need not need to search Europe for musical talent," according to Radio Review and Home Mechanic of New York, which tells how Miss Browning gave radio fans a treat on the eve of her recent departure for France, where she will resume her studies under Professor Trabedelo. Miss Browning is a daughter of President and Mrs. George E. Browning of Weber stake, Ogden.

The newspaper says it is seldom that such exquisite notes grace our loud speakers and telephone receivers. Her voice, brilliant, clear and flexible, was a great pleasure to listen to. Miss Browning chose her program with all the tastes of a well finished artist and with full thought for her great cosmopolitan audience. Her "Best Little Mother" song, which was one of her popular numbers, was bound to find a place in the hearts of all her hearers.

"Miss Browning has the west and has all the characteristics of that part of the country, which she comes from a talented family can be appreciated when it is said she is a niece of the inventor of the Browning machine gun."

"Miss Browning is an ambitious girl and the fans who enjoyed her singing will be sorry to learn that she is sailing on the Olympic today for Paris, where she will remain indefinitely to complete her musical education with her famous teacher."

"Those who listened to this talented young singer never realized that she was working under the disadvantages of a bad cold. Had it not been for this and the fact that she was subjecting her voice to an unusual strain she would have been glad to have rendered other numbers."

In its announcement of the radio concert, the New York Evening Mail said, "Miss Mariane Browning is the latest and most promising protégé of that great Parisian instructor Trabedelo, the man who developed Mary Garden, Geraldine Farrar and Mme. Sembrich."

"Miss Browning is the most promising pupil Professor Trabedelo has had since Jean Gordon, now of the Metropolitan Opera company. She was quickly given a place on the program when it was learned that she was returning to Paris Saturday to resume her studies. Miss Browning's program will include classical selections and old-fashioned melodies."

SUBURBAN DAY SALES SUCCESS

Merchants Pleased With Results of First Observance

Suburban Day was a complete success from the standpoint of retail business in Ogden, according to statements made this morning by various Ogden merchants. Stores in which special Suburban Day sales were held were crowded throughout the entire day, many stores reported the largest business of the year, others that the business was exceptional for the season. People were attracted to Ogden, according to the merchants, from all parts of northern Utah and even from other states and took the opportunity afforded by Suburban Day to make many purchases.

One noticeable feature of the day was the number of automobile sales, several auto dealers reporting that they had exceptional business on Suburban Day.

The Suburban Day committee announced this morning two more of the prize awards. Thomas F. Potter of 663 Twenty-seventh street, secured the prize for the greatest aggregate value of purchases made during the day, his sales slips totaling $1695.75. The McLaughlin-Storcy company won the prize for the most novel painted car, an entry of a car painted "California style." This car is owned by W. H. Reeder, Jr. and was painted in the McLaughlin-Storcy shops, being the first of this type of painting in Ogden.
